THE PREFACE.

THE Publick being very ſenſible of the great Advantage and Uſefulneſs of DICTIONARIES, as is evident from the general Acceptation that many New Ones, in moſt Faculties, have lately met with, it were altogether needleſs to inſiſt on that Topick; but it is requiſite to give ſome Account of the preſent Undertaking, and to ſhew what Improvements are here made to the Elaborate Work of our Ingenious Countryman Mr. Edward Phillips, the Merit of which has been already ſufficiently made known to the World, by the Sale of Six ſeveral Impreſſions.

THE Whole has been carefully Revis'd, in order to correct Faults, ſupply Defects, and retrench Superfluities; and it was judg'd expedient to leave out all Abſtracts of the Lives of Eminent Perſons, Poetical Fictions, Geographical Deſcriptions of Places, &c. (except a few that ſerve to illuſtrate or explain other Terms, which have their Derivation from, or ſome Dependance on them) in regard that they are already treated of at large, in ſeveral particular Dictionaries. In the room of theſe, are inſerted near Twenty Thouſand hard Words and Terms in all Arts and Sciences, which are not to be found in the former Editions of this Work, nor in any other General Dictionary whatſoever; that is to ſay, ſuch Terms as relate to Divinity, the Civil and Canon Law, the Common and Statute Laws of this Realm, Moral and Natural Philoſophy, Metaphyſicks, Mathematicks, Botanicks, Muſick, Phyſick, Surgery, Anatomy, Chymiſtry, Pharmacy, Confectionery, Cookery, Maritime and Military Affairs, Merchandize, Husbandry, Horſemanſhip, Handicrafts, and Manufactures: To which are added many Country-Words, and ſuch as are us'd in our ancient Latin Writers, old Records, Deeds, Charters, Evidences &c. Alſo the Greek and Latin Names of many ſorts of Beaſts, Birds, Fiſhes, Inſects, Plants, Metals, Minerals, and other Productions of Nature, with their reſpective Qualities, and principal Virtues. The Magiſtrates and Officers of the Grecian and Roman Empires, with their Sacred Rites, Laws, Cuſtoms, Feſtivals, Games, Exerciſes and Sports, are likewiſe particularly inſiſted on. Beſides a ſummary View of Religious Orders, Monaſteries, Hereſies and Sects; with a ſhort Deſcription of Publick Buildings, noted Colleges, Hoſpitals, Schools, Offices, Natural Rarities, and other Remarkable Things in England, and our American Plantations: Alſo an exact Account of Ancient and Modern Coins, Weights and Meaſures with their present Value, Extent, and Capacity, &c. all digested into Alphabetical Order, and Methodically expres's'd in their proper Places.

THIS Collection is made out of the most Approved Authors, and the best Originals the present Age affords; and 'tis far the largest of any hitherto extant, (as it has been already hinted) in regard that it contains all manner of difficult Words and Terms of Art, which are to be found in any Writers of Note: So that now, more than ever, it may be justly said to answer the Title of The New World of Words, Universal Dictionary, or Compleat Glossography. As for the individual Terms, care has been taken every where to set down their Original and proper Signification, which tends very much to clear up the several Senses wherein they are now generally receiv'd: And they are also explain'd with all possible Perspicuity and Brevity, so as not to interpret any hard Word by others that are as little intelligible, or at least not so obvious to Persons who are not well vers'd in polite Literature; a Fault too frequent in Performances of this Nature.

AND farther, although it be no Part of our Design, to teach the Liberal or Mechanical Arts and Sciences, as a late Learned Author has attempted to do; nevertheless, it may be fairly affirm'd, There are many Principles and Rules laid down, with opposite Hints, and Remarks throughout the whole Work, which may give Light even to the Knowledge of those Arts: So as to be of very good Use to young Students and Practitioners of every Profession; as also to Foreigners, who are desirous to be acquainted with the Terms and peculiar Idioms of our English Tongue; which is now so far improv'd, that for Copiousness, variety of Style, clearness and elegancy of Expression, and other Advantages, it may be said to equal, if not surpass, all other Modern Languages.

TO conclude, if this Undertaking meets with a favourable Reception among the Judicious, it will be an ample Recompence for the great Pains taken by the Publisher, who is ever ambitious to approve himself,

Their very humble Servant,

John Kersey.

Abaſſi, a Coin current in Perſia, and other Eaſtern Countries, worth about two Spaniſh Reals, or 1 s. 2 d. Sterling.

To Abate, (Fr.) to diminiſh, to make or grow leſs:

Digitized by Google

leſs: In Common-Law, to diſable, defeat, or overthrow; to come to nought, to be aboliſhed, quaſhed, or made of no effect: Thus to abate a Writ is to deſtroy it for a Time, thro' want of good Ground, or other Defect. The Appeal abateth by Couſenage, i. e. the Accuſation is defeated or made void by Deceit.

A Stranger is alſo ſaid to Abate, when he enters upon a Houſe or Land immediately after the Death of the laſt Poſſeſſour, before the right Heir take Poſſeſſion, and ſo keeps the ſaid Heir out of it.

Abatement, that which is abated, a Leſſening: In a Law-ſenſe, the Act of Abating, Defeating, or Diſabling; as the Abatement of a Writ, &c. Alſo the entring upon an Inheritance, by ſtepping in between the former Poſſeſſour and his Heir.

Abatement of Honour, (in Heraldry) is an accidental Mark added to a Coat of Arms, whereby its Dignity is abaſed, upon Account of ſome diſhonourable Quality or Stain in the Bearer; and it is either a Mark of Diminution; as a Delf, a Point Dexter parted Tenne, a Goar Siniſter, &c. Or elſe an abſolute Reverſion or Over-turning of the whole Eſcutcheon.

Abator, (Law-Term) one that abates, i. e. intrudes into Houſes or Land, void by the Death of the former Poſſeſſour, and as yet not entred or taken up by his Heir.

Abatures, (among Hunters) Foiling, the Sprigs or Graſs that a Stag thruſts down in paſſing by.

Abaſhed, abaſhed, daunted, a Word us'd by the famous Engliſh Poet, Geffrey Chaucer.

Abba, a Scripture-word, ſignifying Father in the Syriack Tongue.

Abbacy, or Abbathy, a Law-word for an Abbey.

Abbat, ſee Abbot.

Abbatis, (in old Records) an Avener or Steward of the Stables; an Hoſtler.

Abbeſs, a Governeſs of Nuns.

Abbey, a Monaſtery or Convent, a Houſe for Religious Perſons.

Abbot, or Abbat, the chief Ruler of an Abbey: Of theſe ſome in England wore Miters, ſome not; ſuch as were Mitred being free from the Biſhop's Juriſdiction, had the ſame Authority within their Bounds, and were alſo Lords of Parliament, but the other ſort were ſubject to the Biſhop in all Eccleſiaſtical Affairs.

To Abbreviate, (Lat.) to Abridge, or make ſhort.

Abbreviation, an Abbreviating, or Expreſſing a Thing in fewer Terms.

Abbreviature, a ſhort'ning, as the putting of a Letter for a Word.

Abbuttals, the Buttings and Boundings of Land, High-ways, &c. either to the Eaſt, Weſt, North, or South; ſhewing how they lie with reſpect to other Places.

Abdals, a kind of religious Perſons among the Perſians, who make Profeſſion of Poverty, and lodge in Churches: They take Name from Abdala, the Father of their falſe Prophet Mahomet.

Abdebenam, the Head of the twelfth Houſe in a Scheme or Figure of the Heavens, ſometimes ſo call'd by Aſtrologers.

Abdi, (Heb. my Servant) the Father of Kiſh, and Grand-father of Saul the firſt King of Iſrael.

Abdicare, (Lat.) a Term in the Roman Law, ſignifying to abdicate, to renounce, abandon, or quit; as Abdicare filium, to diſinherit, diſown, or caſt off a Son; Abdicare Magiſtratum, or ſe Magiſtratu, to renounce the Office of a Magiſtrate, to lay down or abandon it; and Abdicare ſe ſtatu ſuo, was to renounce his Condition, to become a Slave, and be degraded from the Privilege of a Citizen of Rome.

To Abdicate, to Renounce or Reſign, to give over.

Abdication, the voluntary Act of Abdicating, Renouncing, Diſowning, &c. A Term generally us'd among the Civilians, and alſo in the Common Law, where there is only an implicit Renunciation: As when a Perſon does Actions that are altogether inconſiſtent with the Nature of his Truſt, he does in effect renounce it; which was the famous Caſe of a late unfortunate Prince.

Abdicere, (Lat.) a Word us'd among the Roman Augurs or Sooth-ſayers, for to diſown or forbid: In a Law-ſenſe, to give Sentence againſt one, to debar him from his Demands, or not to allow them: Thus abdicere vindicias ſignify'd as much as not to allow a Man the Poſſeſſion of a Thing in Controverſy; and addicere vindicias imply'd the quite contrary.

Abditorium, (in our old Writers) an Abditory, or Place to hide and keep Goods, Plate, Money, &c.

Abdomen, (in Anat.) that Part of the Belly which is between the Navel and the Privities, the lower Belly; the lowermoſt of the three Venters, or great Cavities, which contains the Stomach, Guts, Liver, Spleen, Bladder, &c. And is cover'd on the Inſide with a Membrane or thin Skin, called the Peritonæum.

Abductor Indicis, (Lat. in Anat.) a Muſcle that ſerves to draw the Fore-finger from the others, and is by ſome reckon'd among the Interoſſei: It ariſes from the Os Metacarpi that bears up the Fore-finger, and joining one of the Lumbrical Muſcles is inſerted with it, together with the Tendon of the Abductor Pollicis.

Abductor minimi Digiti, a Muſcle which draws the little Finger from the reſt, and appears in ſome Bodies divided into two or three Muſcles, each having a different Series of Fibres: It takes Riſe from the Ligamentum Tranſverſale, and fourth Bone of the Carpus, as alſo from the third Bone of the Carpus, and from the upper Parts of the Os Metacarpi. The firſt of theſe Originations ends at the upper Part of the firſt Bone of the little Finger forwards; the ſecond at the ſame Part of the ſaid Bone ſide-ways; and the third is inſerted with the Tendon of the Extenſor minimi Digiti, to the upper Part of the third Bone of the little Finger.

Abductor minimi Digiti Pedis, a Muſcle of the little Toe, which draws it off from the reſt, and ſprings from the outward Part of the Os Calcis or Heel Bone, as alſo from the out-ſide of the Os Metatarſi of the little Toe; where it makes one Tendon at its Inſertion to the upper Part of the firſt Bone of the little Toe, on the out-ſide and ſide-ways.

Abductor Oculi, a Muſcle of the Eye, ſo nam'd from its Action, which is to draw off the Eye from the Noſe: It is alſo call'd Indignabundus, from its being made uſe of in Scornful Reſentments.

Digitized by Google

Abductor Pollicis, is a Muſcle of the Thumb, which ariſes from the inner part of the Ligamentum Tranſverſale Carpi, and becomes Tendinous as its Implantation to the upper and outward part of the ſecond Bone of the Thumb ſide-ways. This Muſcle takes Name from its Uſe, which is to draw the Thumb from the Fingers.

Abductor Pollicis Pedis, a Muſcle of the great Toe, which pulls it from the reſt: It takes riſe from the Os Calcis, on the in-ſide and ſide-ways, and in half its Progreſs joyns with another fleſhy Beginning that ſprings from the Os Cuneiforme Majus, which bears up the Os Metatarſi of the great Toe; 'till at laſt both making one Tendon are implanted to the outward part of the Os Seſamoides of the great Toe, ſide-ways.

Abductores, or Abducent Muſcles, (in the general) are all thoſe which ſerve to open or pull back divers Parts of the Body; as the Arms, Legs, Eyes, Noſtrils, Lips, &c. And the Oppoſites to theſe are uſually termed Adductores, or Adducent Muſcles.

A-bearing, (Law-word) as, To be bound to a good a-bearing, i. e. to one's good Behaviour. See Surety of the Peace.

To Abedge, to abide. Chaucer.

Abel, (Heb. Vanity) the Name of Adam's ſecond Son, who was killed by his Brother Cain.

Abele-Tree, a finer kind of white Poplar.

Abere, Murder, (old Law-term) plain or downright Murder, as diſtinguiſhed from Manſlaughter and Chance-medley, from the Saxon Words abere apparent, notorious and Mord Murder.

To Abet, to encourage, egg, or ſet on; to maintain, uphold, or back; to aſſiſt or aid.

Abetment, (in common Law) an encouraging or ſetting on to commit any Crime.

Abetter, or Abettor, one that eggs on or aſſiſts another in the doing of an Unlawful Act; as Abettors of Murder, Treaſon, Felony, &c.

Abettors, (in a Law-ſenſe) are alſo thoſe that without Cauſe procure others to ſue out falſe Appeals of Murder or Felony againſt Men, in order to render them infamous.

Abeyance, Lands, Tenements, Goods, &c. Are ſaid to be in Abeyance, when they are only in Expectation or Underſtanding; that is to ſay, in the Intendment and Conſideration of the Law. So when a Parſon dies and the Church is void, the Fee is in Abeyance, becauſe it is not determined who ſhall ſucceed him.

To Abhor, (Lat.) to loath or hate.

Abhorrence, or Abhorrency, an abhorring or loathing.

Abhorrent, that abhors or loaths, that is averſe from; as Humane Nature is abhorrent from all ſuch Evils.

To Cond or Conn, (Sea-term) to conduct, or guide a Ship in the right Course; for he that conns, stands aloft with a Compass before him, and gives the Word of Direction to the Man at the Helm how to steer.

If the Ship go before the Wind, or betwixt two Sheets, the Words of Art are, Port the Helm, i. e. put the Helm on the Left-hand, or Left-side of the Ship; or Starboard the Helm, i. e. put it to the Right; and then the Ship will always go the contrary Way. If the Conder say, Helm a Mid-ship, he would have the Ship go right before the Wind, or directly between her two Sheets. If the Ship sail by a Wind, or on a Quarter-wind, the Word is a-loof! keep your Loof! fall not off! veer no more! keep her to't! touch the Wind! have a care of the Lee-latch! All which Expressions are of the same Signification, only imply that the Steersman should keep the Ship near the Wind: On the contrary, to make her go more large, or more before the Wind, the usual Phrases are, Ease the Helm! No near! Bear up! But if the Conder say Steady, his meaning is that the Ship should be kept from making Yaws, or going in and out; and when he would have her go just as she does, he cries Keep her thus, thus! &c.
